

Hui Kako‘o O Laupahoehoe Offers Community Wood Shop Classes

Hui Kako‘o O Laupahoehoe is offering woodshop classes to the community Saturday mornings at Laupahoehoe Community Public Charter School. Master woodworker Peter Zirola is the instructor, assisted by Don Bryan.

Attendees will learn woodworking basics or sharpen their skills in a series of five 4-hour Saturday classes. All skill levels are welcome. Attendees will benefit from experienced instructors as they assist them in building a project of their choice. They can build anything from a cutting board to kitchen cabinets; or finish a project from a previous class.

Laupahoehoe Wood Shop is fully stocked with fine woodworking tools and equipment. The next series of five classes starts January 8, 2022. Cost for the series is $145 + $25 supply fee. Prior students and experienced woodworkers may do drop in classes for $40 per class. The class is limited to 10 students. You must register and pay online.

The mission of Laupahoehoe Community Education Classes is to create a safe, communal space for our Community - including beginners, professionals, keiki and adults - to come together and express their creative sides and learn new skills. They offer a wide range of classes for all students. Whether you're a professional looking for new inspiration, a brand new student hoping to learn a thing or two about art, cooking, or gardening or if you're simply interested in picking up a new hobby, Laupahoehoe Community Education Classes will welcome you into the fold. They are also accepting applications for instructors to share their gifts with our Community. Learn more at The Hui.
